Many Attend Last Rites for Mrs. J. O. C. McDonald

End Came Unexpectedly While Husband Was Absent on Duties in McGillivray Mine.

Funeral services for Mrs. J. O. C. McDonald were held last afternoon at St. Paul's United Church, Rev. H. J. Beran, former minister here, conducting.

Though she had been ailing for some time, her death came as a shock to a large circle of friends in this community, where she had lived for about 35 years, with the exception of a brief period at Brule, Alta., where for a time Mr. McDonald was mine manager.

The services were attended by a large number of people from the district, and many were unable to gain admittance to the church. The pall-bearers were T. Flynn, A. F. Short, W. L. Borrows, H. C. McBurney, Norman E. Macaulay, and H. H. Gardner. Many beautiful floral tributes were sent by friends.

Sympathy is extended to Mr. McDonald in his bereavement, and to his son John, who is on the teaching staff here, and daughters, Mrs. W. Whittaker (Verna) of Fernie, and Mrs. J. T. Cairns, (Margaret) of Rochester, N.Y. Only a short time before her death Mrs. McDonald received news from her daughter Margaret of the birth of a son.

Mr. McDonald, who was home during the noon hour on Wednesday, stated that his wife complained of pain, but urged him to return to the mine, as she did not consider it sufficiently serious for him to remain at home. It was only a short time after that she passed away, their maid being with her at the time.

REV. ROY TAYLOR IN VETERANS' GUARD

Rev. Roy Taylor, former M.L.A. for the Pincher Creek riding, and at one time deputy speaker of the Alberta legislature, is in the army. Mr. Taylor, a United church minister and veteran of the first World War, enlisted this week and was attested. He will be attached for the present with the Veterans' Guard at Kananaskis, but may be transferred to another centre later. He hopes eventually to get overseas. —Calgary Herald.

Kimberley Defeats Coleman Pucksters By Score of 13-2

Kimberley routed the Coleman Pucksters by a 13 to 2 score on Sunday, when under the Steady pitching of Humble, they tied up with Coleman for the leadership of the Crows Nest Pass league.

The Kimberley team committed 4 errors, all of them being overthrows, but with the offering of 3 Coleman pitchers they banded out 17 hits.

Molyneux was starting pitcher for the Coleman team but threw his arm out in the fourth inning and after allowing 4 runs and 7 hits had to be relieved.

The exhibition of the game in itself was very poor, due to the inability of the Coleman team to deal with the expert bunting of the B.C. team. In two innings, with bases loaded Kimberley bunted home three runs.

Due to the faulty fielding of the Pucksters, C. Sordemo and Arnold both stretched singles into home runs. Coleman's 7 hits were kept well scattered.

Batteries: Humble and Crowder. Molyneux, Fields, Bell and Sordemo.

Miss Josephine Rose of Kimberley, B.C., was the weekend guest of Dr. and Mrs. C. Rose.

MOUNT EDITH CAVELL

A Mountain Memorial To A Heroic Woman

There are many monuments to the memory of the heroes and heroines who gave their lives for the cause of freedom and democracy in the first world war but the majestic shrine which has been named after nurse Edith Cavell is perhaps the most inspiring of them all. Beautiful Mount Edith Cavell in Jasper National Park will keep alive the memory of that courageous woman as long as the heroic exploits of the men and women who thwarted the German bid for world domination a quarter of a century ago are recalled.

The story of nurse Edith Cavell is known to almost every school boy and girl in the English and French speaking world. In the grey dawn of an October morning in 1915 this kindly woman was taken from her prison cell to face a German firing squad. Her "crime" had been that although she was living in enemy-occupied country, she remained loyal to her own people and concealed a number of British soldiers who were being pursued by the German "gestapo" of that day. There are many nurse Cavells in the present conflict who will draw courage and inspiration from the example by one of their number who put the interest of her country before her own personal safety although she must have known full well the price which German ruthlessness would exact for her patriotism. Mount Edith Cavell is one of the most remarkable peaks in the Canadian Rockies. It occupies an almost isolated position and is clearly visible from points 20 miles distant. The peak rises to a height of over 11,000 feet and is perpetually hooded with a white mantle of snow. Appropriately, too, the side of this magnificent mountain is hung with a gleaming white glacier which gives the impression of a great white angel with outstretched wings keeping peaceful vigil over the valley below. This symbolic figure on the mountain memorial has been named "Angel Glacier" and was visited by the King and Queen during their visit to Canada in 1929.

Mount Edith Cavell has many moods and to know it one must see it at all hours of the day and under different weather conditions. On grey days its appearance may suggest to many a sorrowing mood but on sunny days its snowy cap and sparkling raiment gleams with celestial purity against the clear blue sky. In the moonlight it is indescribably beautiful suggesting a peace and tranquillity of spirit that recall the last words of Edith Cavell just before her execution: "There must be no bitterness nor hatred towards anyone." Mount Edith Cavell lies approximately 12½ miles south of the town of Jasper in Alberta and is accessible by a first-class motor road. This year it is receiving an even increasing number of visitors, including many from various parts of the United States.

Soldiers' Letters

Canadian Legion: Just a few lines to let you know I have received several bundles of "Sweet Caps" since you started your cigarette fund last fall. Thanks a lot and the best of luck to you all. —Private Alex Kanik.

Dear Sirs: Received fags today. Thanks a million. I always look forward to them so you can see they are put to a worthy cause. Smokes are still very scarce in this country and Canadian cigarettes will always be welcome. Once again I thank you. —Thankfully, —Sergeant Celli.

Dear Members of the Legion: Received your parcel today. Cigarettes are very scarce over here at present and your smokes have brought many comforting hours to us, mostly when we are on guard every second day. A cigarette is our only friend then and we think of you all and the things back home worth fighting for.

Roy and Ross Foster are still carrying along with me. We hear a little news now and then of the other Coleman boys in different outfits and they all seem to be making out alright. Closing with many thanks to you all, Your friend, Johnnie Raymond.

Dear Members: Received your cigarettes dated May 25 and sure was glad to get them as they are hard to get over here now. We are still in England and the weather over here is grand now. We have a swimming pool where we are stationed and are in the water every day. Thanks again for the cigarettes. So long for now. —Private Ross Foster.

Dear Alex: This is just a note to say hello to you and the boys, also to tell you that I had a safe crossing in April. Right now I am at Inverness, Scotland, attending a master cooking course as they call it over here. I have been here two weeks and have one more week to go. Inverness is a wonderful city and it is more like a holiday than a school or course.

Would you mind sending me the addresses of a few fellows I know that are over here. That is if you have the addresses or would care to get them for me.

Well I must close for now and wish you and all the rest of the boys the best of health. —Sergeant W. S. Vollendorf.

WEDDINGS

WATSON—SCOTT

A very pretty wedding took place at the Salvation Army Citadel, Lethbridge, Wednesday, July 16, at 7 p.m. when Captain Roberts Scott daughter of Mr. R.W. Scott and the late Mrs. Scott of Lethbridge, became the bride of Captain Frederick Watson of Coleman, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Watson of Vancouver. Brigadier Uraski, divisional commander for Alberta conducted the ceremony.

The couple then left for the coast where they will spend a short vacation, and then will return to Coleman.

Barbara Koury Died From Gun Wound

Three Children Playing With Loaded Revolver When It Was Accidentally Discharged; Died In Hospital Monday Morning.

Barbara Koury, aged 8, passed away at the Miners' hospital at 115 Monday morning from a gun wound received while playing with a loaded revolver with her two brothers. The accident took place at the home of Mr. Charles Nicholas, Second street, between eight and eight-thirty Sunday morning.

According to a police report the gun was the property of an uncle. He was taking care of the proceeds from the Elks carnival and had the gun for protection of the money. He had the gun beneath his pillow but finding it uncomfortable, later in the night placed it within easy reach of his bed. The children came into the room early Sunday morning and took it into another room, where they started to play with it. Upon hearing the shot the adults in the house rushed to the scene and found the gun in the hands of one of the children. Barbara was found to have been shot in the stomach. She was rushed to the Miners' hospital where she passed away some hours later.

The little girl follows her mother into death by one month, the mother having passed away on June 20.

The Misses Lottie, Annie and Emily Nicholas who had left only a few hours earlier for a vacation at Seattle were called home when they reached Bonnyfermy.

No inquest was held, there being no doubt in the minds of authorities that it was purely an accidental death.

The funeral was held on Wednesday afternoon from the family residence to Holy Ghost church where Rev. Fisher officiated. Pallbearers were the Misses Anita Coccione, Louise Joseph, Frances Thorner and Eleanor Proski. Interment was made in the Catholic cemetery.

Evelyn Carmelo Laid To Rest

Many sorrowing friends of the late Evelyn Carmelo, who passed away on Monday, July 14, gathered at the family home to pay their last respects. The funeral procession proceeded to the Holy Ghost church where Lebra was sung.

Flower girls, who were close friends of the deceased, included Doris and Mildred Griffiths, Annie and Mildred Mahovich, Margaret Milley and Madeline Joseph. Pall bearers were Americo Perissini, Nick Schlosser, George Erwin, Joe D'Andria and Robert Selount.

The deceased was a bright and ambitious girl, full of life and vivacity, and a general favorite with all. She became well known here by her cheerful disposition and it is with profound regret that the news was received of her passing.

THREE DAYS FROM ENGLAND TO VANCOUVER

Three days after taking off from an English flying field, Flying Officer Francis W. Smith, R.A.F., landed at Vancouver airport aboard a Trans-Canada Air Lines plane. The young airman, whose home is in Vancouver and who has recently been ferrying bombers across the Atlantic to Britain, came home unannounced.

Homeward bound, where he will stay about 12 days, FO Smith flew across the Atlantic, took a train to Winnipeg, and then boarded a T.C.A. plane for Vancouver.

Elks' Carnival Well Attended

Large crowds thronged the Coleman arena on Saturday and Monday nights where they attended the Elks annual carnival. Fun and a good time was enjoyed by everyone. The weight guessing booth was a new feature attraction and caused a great amusement among young and old. Many people went home with dolls, dogs, blankets and other novelties. The dance platform was crowded with couples both nights.

Miss Helen Gate, who was crowned carnival queen, received a Pak-a-way bag. Runner up to Miss Gate was Miss Fay Grant, who received an overnight bag. Major prizes of the carnival were won by the following: Sam Lee, $100.00 Victory Bond; Mike Harry of Coleman was the lucky winner of the four-piece Chesterfield suite.

Hon. W. A. Fallow, minister of public works, thought up a new idea Friday in the midst of the hot spell. Acting on the principle that "It's the heat, not the humidity," he ordered the heating system of the legislative buildings stuffed with ice. Thereafter, doors were closed. After an hour or so the heat registers were opened in various offices—and cool breezes emerged.

Visual War Education

The value of ocular public demonstration and display of Canada's war effort in all its vast ramifications as a stimulus to further effort is only just beginning to be appreciated by the authorities in charge of the greatest single objective in our national history. It is a form of propaganda which is needed to bring home to many people of the country the fact that while much is being done in the fight to preserve liberty much more can be done if only every man can be brought to realize it, and the necessity for it.

The word "propaganda" is used in its best and proper sense, not with the idea of attempting to fool the people into believing something that is not so, but with the intention of uncovering the facts, presenting them in the most easily assimilable form and in such a manner that the people themselves can readily appreciate the implications the facts may convey and draw their own conclusions therefrom. That is the only enduring and effective type of propaganda. That is the sole form in which propaganda will not defeat its own ends. It is missionary work.

Something has already been done in this direction and what has been done is commendable, but the fact that there yet remain citizens of the country who are not yet fully conscious of the imperative nature of the demands for an all-out effort, that there are still some who are willing to concede the necessity for great sacrifices but are not willing to put into practice what they preach, indicates the necessity of more missionary work along the lines indicated.

Value Demonstrated

The interest evinced by the general public in army life as shown by the larger number of people who flocked to the military camps when they were first thrown open to public inspection on Army Day gives an inkling of the value of this form of demonstration. It is satisfactory to learn that from time to time similar occasions will be arranged by military districts on the authority of the Department of National Defence.

Major-General B. W. Browne, D.S.O., M.C., Adjutant General, who originated Army Day is quoted as saying: "This first chance for the public to see army personnel on and off parade, to see the complicated war machines, and to examine everyday life of those who have realized their responsibilities of citizenship in a democracy and have freely volunteered to defend that democracy, has developed a keener interest in the men upon whose self-sacrifice Canada must rely if freedom is to prevail."

Major-General Browne would not have gone astray if he had added that this visible demonstration of army life and all that it implies must have had some effect in encouraging those young and able-bodied men who are in a position to offer their services and have not yet done so, to face up to their responsibilities and to realize more fully, with the example before them, that they, too, have a duty to a country which has afforded them so many privileges.

In Another Direction

That the value of visible display as a stimulus to the war effort is taking shape in the official mind was evidenced in another direction when the announcement was made that the Department of Munitions and Supply would stage an exhibit at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto, August 22 to September 6, in an effort to give visitors to the fair "some conception of the gigantic scope of the Dominion's industrial war effort."

At this exhibit, it is stated, will be seen made-in-Canada heavy infantry and cruiser tanks, field guns, anti-aircraft gun barrels, machine guns, rifles, searchlights, naval craft, Universal carriers, motor trucks, aerial bombs, shells, cartridge cases, fuses and a host of other things which civilians rarely see. Better still, action is to be brought into the picture, as Canadian men and women will be seen actually at work on machines which turn out Bren guns, Lee-Enfield rifles, highly intricate fire control equipment and other essentials of modern warfare. Where demonstrations are impossible, huge photographic enlargements will tell the story of the "battle of the factories."

When one remembers that the Canadian war effort is the greatest activity which is dominating or should dominate the public consciousness it can readily be conceived that this display will greatly outstrip all others in popularity at the National Exhibition, that it will prove to be the greatest drawing card at the fair and that it will leave a deep impress on the minds of all who see it, an impress which should bear fruit in a greater war activity in all branches.

Unfortunately, the number of Western Canadians who will have an opportunity of seeing and benefitting from this great display of what the nation is doing to preserve its great heritage of liberty will be very limited. If this exhibit is to achieve the maximum results of which it is capable it should be made a travelling display, so that it may be seen and the lessons it should convey may be learned by westerners in the most graphic form—through the eye.

Let us have more ocular demonstration of the Canadian war effort and let every citizen from the Atlantic to the Pacific have an opportunity of seeing it.

No Match For British

Germany's Blue-Eyed Pilots Do Not See So Well At Night

Germany will lose the war because her people in the main, have blue eyes, according to Dr. Harold R. Silverman, president of the New Jersey Optometric Association.

His explanation: "It is a scientific fact that the more pigment in the eye the better the sight at night. Once Hitler's opponents can match plane for plane and the various other weapons that are used under the cover of darkness, the human element behind these mechanical tangles will become the deciding factor, and Hitler's inferior and lightly pigmented night operators will be no match for the sharp-shooting British and other more deeply pigmented peoples."

All Have A Value

British Post Office Receiving Stamps Damaged By Nazi Bombs

The British Post Office is getting returned hundreds of stamps made unfit by incendiary bombs or burned under wreckage. Many safes have been recovered from bombed buildings and in nearly all of them were sheets of stamps. Heat had melted the gum and joined sheets in compact blocks, but experts at headquarters could usually separate the stamps and assess the value, reports the London Sunday Dispatch. A commission of five per cent. is charged on the face value of the stamps repurchased. Inland revenue, insurance, and entertainment duty stamps, medicine labels and playing card wrappers have also been found. All have a value.

This Canadian Was Lucky

English Girl Gave Him Enough Coupons For Running Shoes

"One doesn't always expect a return for what one gives."

In that simple, honest sentence a breathless English girl, standing on a busy street corner at midday, epitomized the British people's philosophy of wartime sacrifice and their boundless generosity to Canadians overseas.

For nine months as war correspondent with the Canadian forces I've puzzled over an expression or a phrase adequate to explain this generosity, only to be told in it ten words by this fair-haired stenographer in a little incident in a Southern England town.

I had tried to buy a pair of running shoes, but couldn't get them because, living with the army, I had no civilian ration book. Under the new clothing ration, purchase of a pair of these shoes required seven margarine coupons.

I left the shop, and a block away the girl caught up with me, out of breath with her run, shopping and overheard the shopkeeper refuse me the shoes.

"You can get those shoes, really you can," she exclaimed. "I'll get you some ration coupons, I'll get some of my father's."

She looked at the "Canada" badges on my uniform. "You're a Canadian, aren't you?"

I stood there baffled by this sudden kindness from a complete stranger, mumbled my thanks and something about being unable to return the precious coupons.

"Oh, don't let that worry you at all," she replied, and added almost apologetically: "One doesn't always expect a return for what one gives."

Then, as if to make the offer more plausible, she said: "I have an aunt in Canada, you know, in Toronto." We walked back to the store. She handed the shoe merchant the coupons and I got the shoes. Her name: Miss Muriel Bennett. Her aunt: Miss Florence Bushell, a friend of Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner in London, and Mrs. Massey. Miss Bushell aided in evacuating some British children to Canada and now lives in Toronto.

SELECTED RECIPES

APRICOT UPSIDE DOWN CAKE

1 1/2 cups sifted cake flour
1 1/2 teaspoons double-acting baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons butter or other shortening
4 tablespoons butter
3/4 cup granulated sugar
1 egg, well beaten
1/2 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 cup brown sugar, firmly packed
12 cooked apricots
Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add egg; then flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time. Beat after each addition until smooth. Add vanilla.

Melt 4 tablespoons butter in 8-inch iron skillet, or in cake pan, 8x8x2 inches. Add brown sugar. Stir until melted. On this arrange apricots, cut-side up. Pour batter over contents of pan. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 50 minutes, or until done. Loosen cake from sides and bottom of pan with spatula. Serve upside down on dish with apricots on top.

A Fearless Commander

Soviet Pilot Steered Flaming Plane Into Enemy Fuel Tanks

A Russian statement reported that a Soviet pilot crashed his flaming plane into German gasoline tank trucks in an explosive suicide climax to an encounter at the front.

A shell from a German anti-aircraft gun was said to have hit the gasoline tank of the Russian planes, piloted by Capt. Gastele, commander of an air squadron.

"The fearless commander piloted his plane, enveloped in flames, into a concentration of enemy motor cars and fuel tank cars," the account said. "Dozens of German cars and tank cars exploded, together with the hero's plane."

The Mosquito Pest

Suggested Ways Of Dealing With This Tormentor And Assassin

Mosquitoes are the tormentors of the insect world, with nightly incursions of torture. They cause much suffering in summer and some species are highly dangerous because they transmit malaria, dengue and other ills. Do not allow water to stand in roof gutters or drain pipes, as mosquitoes breed in stagnant pools. The old-time rain barrel is more romantic than sanitary.

The eggs of many common mosquitoes are laid in minute rafts consisting of several hundred eggs standing on end. Eggs of material and yellow fever mosquitoes are deposited singly and float about on the water. The mosquito larvae are the familiar "wigglers" often seen on the surface of quiet water. The larvae speedily become full grown and pass into the pupal stage. The pupae swim about in the water and are sometimes called "tumblers." After a short period the skin of the pupae splits and the adult mosquitoes emerge, spread their wings and fly.

Most species propagate a number of generations each year. When the presence of mosquitoes in the bedroom precludes untroubled rest, spray the room before retiring, following the same procedure as that suggested for getting rid of flies. The mosquito, like the fly and some other insects, breathes through pores along each side of its body and must be enveloped in the spray for efficient results. The pyrethrum commonly used in household sprays paralyzes the nervous system and brings death.

Mosquitoes make the porch uninhabitable or spoil your fun on a picnic, spray your shoes, the back of your neck and your clothing lightly, and the mosquitoes will leave you alone for some time. At lawn parties, good results have been obtained by wrapping the legs of tables with paper and spraying this covering with insecticide. Modern household sprays also kill spiders, thousand-leggers, wasps, ants and other insects that may disturb outdoor meals.

A Different Pawnshop

Buenos Aires Has Only One But It Is Unusual

The Municipal Bank of Loans is the only pawnshop in Buenos Aires. If a woman pawns her sewing machine and can prove that it is her means of livelihood she may have it back for nothing, only once a year. Some 4,000 women annually pawn their machines just before the return date is due. The following week they get them back, and the entire transaction is carried on without tongue in cheek on either side—Maclean's Magazine.

British Airman's Hard Luck

Broke His Leg In Simple Accident After Thrilling Escape

Flying over Germany a British airman had his machine practically wrecked by shellfire but he managed to stagger it home to England. It started to come apart, and he baled out in the dark and floated to safety in a country garden landing unhurt. Then he started to walk to the house—tripped over a croquet hoop, and broke his leg.

Prophecy Was Correct

Clemenceau Said Germans Would Cause Trouble Under A New Leader

"The Germans," said Clemenceau, "cannot be trusted. They are always the same, and always will be. They will always have someone at their head who will lead them astray, for they must be led. That is their nature. Ten years ago it was the Kaiser; ten years from now it will be somebody else. Even if as a race they are all right, which I do not believe, then the rest of the world must unite in saving them from the men they select as leaders."

"The Versailles Treaty is endeavoring to do that. If it fails, it will do so for one of two reasons: either it was not severe enough, or else the rest of the world will relax and not continue to impose its obligations. I am too old to see the fulfillment of my prophecy. I do not know if you will, but I know what I am saying will come to pass."

Seize Perfumery Oils

French Consignment Is Halted At Bermuda

Seizure of $120,000 worth of rare French perfume oils by the British authorities when the American export liner Excamption stopped at Bermuda was disclosed with the ship's arrival at Jersey City.

The flower essences were taken from Henri Robert who had packed them in his personal luggage for delivery to the American firm of Coty, Inc.

The British Consulate General Office said the oils probably were seized because they originated in occupied France, which is under British blockade, and because they were not accompanied by a British export permit. The spokesman added that the British authorities presumed that purchase of any material in a Nazi-controlled area would help the Nazis economically.

British Pianos

Trade Has Increased Since The Advent Of The Radio

A few years ago, at the height of the wireless and gramophone entertainment boom, doubts were expressed by some serious musically minded persons whether there would continue to be any incentive or desire among the younger generation to learn to play a musical instrument unless they were adopting music as a profession.

Such fears were not shared by the piano trade, which has always maintained a steady output, though in Britain, like so many other industries, it has had to face severe competition in overseas markets from Germany.

Actually trade in musical instruments has increased rather than declined since the advent of radio, and in Britain piano firms are now selling more instruments to the Dominions than they were before the war—London Times.

Their Favorite Music

Austrian And German Composers Choice Of British People

Newswave says the London Philharmonic orchestra recently completed a tour of Britain's provinces, playing one-night stands in motion picture and vaudeville houses, and is now for the first time in its life, playing in popular London music halls. The orchestra has found that the two favorite composers are the Germans, Beethoven and Brahms, and the third is the Austrian, Mozart.

Prefabricated Houses

Seven-Room Dwellings Can Be Built In Nine Hours

A seven-room dwelling built in nine hours and costing about $1,500 may be the first link in a country-wide chain of prefabricated houses designed to meet Canada's wartime shortage of living accommodation for industrial workers, officials of the Dominion housing administration said.

Result of studies conducted by Housing Administrator F. W. Nicolls and his colleagues, the model unit was constructed at a lumber plant at Ottawa. It is made of standard building materials, all procurable on the Canadian market, and can be dismantled. The latest in plumbing and lighting facilities go with the house.

The model house is a one-story dwelling and has two bedrooms, dining room, living room, kitchen, bathroom and furnace room, making 576 square feet of living space. Floor, ceiling and roof are fitted in 12 separate sections each and the walls in 24 parts.

A Charming Gift

Queen Elizabeth, visiting the offices of the lord mayor's fund for air raid victims, saw an embroidered quilt bearing the names of 600 Canadian children and told the lord mayor she thought it a charming gift. With the quilt the fund received $80, the result of the children paying 10 cents for the privilege of embroidering their names on it.

Victory Campaign In Europe Has Met With Great Success

London.—Britain's "V for Victory" campaign opened on its full scale with telling results reported in stimulating the German-occupied peoples of the continent in the hopes of its not in immediate actual resistance.

Reports received here said the challenging V symbols of victory and liberty with the slogan "Nedane se"—"We will not give in"—were scrawled on walls and fences throughout Czechoslovakia, and that accompanying acts of sabotage were increasing daily in that first non-German land to be occupied.

Reports from Paris told of 6,200 "V" arrests by the German authorities there. Posters in which most of the words started with V have been scattered and pasted throughout the city, it was said, while at Bayonne the letter mysteriously appeared on German automobiles.

"Mobilization of the 'V Army' against Nazi Germany has been a complete success," said the radio announcer who uses the name of "Colonel Britton" in a broadcast directed to all German-occupied countries.

"The results already have surpassed all expectations and the vast army stretches from one end of Europe to the other. . . . The Germans now are bewildered and frightened."

He declared the "V" army stands confident and patient.

"There will be no mistakes," he affirmed. "We are in no hurry."

Vs in tar were reported draped in front of the Hotel de Nimes, France, while the same symbol was said to have been left on the door of the Nazi headquarters near Rouen.

French peasants were said to have originated a method of chalking the letter on their hands so that it is transferred to German soldiers' uniforms from a clap on the back.

It was reported that the Hollanders and Belgians had been impelled to especially bold manifestations. Britons believed Germany's effort to utilize the same symbol in a counter-offensive was admission of grave concern over the effects of the V drive.

A Reuters news agency despatch quoted the Bulgarian radio as saying that European volunteers in the German war against Communist Russia were now wearing a "V" as a distinguishing mark standing for "Viktoria."

But British commentators said ironically that more likely it stood for German vexation of the German word, "verloren," which means "lost."

In Britain, where the psychological war was formally launched July 20 with a BBC broadcast calling for V-day observance and "mobilization" in which Prime Minister Churchill himself gave support to the drive, enthusiasm ran high.

The prime minister's message, read by "Col. Britton," BBC commander of the campaign, said:

"The V sign is the symbol of the unconquerable will of the occupied territories and a portent of the fate awaiting the Nazi tyranny. So long as the peoples of Europe continue to refuse all collaboration with the invader, it is sure that this cause will perish and that Europe will be liberated."

After reading the message "Col. Britton" urged his listeners to "wait for the word," and he promised that "when the moment comes" action would be such that the Germans would be powerless to halt it.

This was believed to be an indication that Britain would call on the occupied countries to rise in arms against the Nazis when the British army again gets a foothold on the continent.

In Britain, daylight found the symbol exuberantly displayed on sidewalks, walls, automobile windshields—everywhere.

Moreton Fraser, harmonica player, has written a V song which is to be introduced to the radio and theatres.

Another V song accentuating the line "never despair, we'll get them yet" was being written for broadcast with Beethoven's fifth symphony as background for the lyrics.

The Morse signal for V—three dots and a dash—is the theme of most of these pieces, and the people were told that "every sound in life" would be turned into the V rhythm.

Australian Bombers

London.—Senator J. Leckie, Australian minister of aircraft production, announced in Melbourne that all tests of the Australian-made British Beaufort bomber have been highly satisfactory, the British Broadcasting Corporation reported. The BBC said Australia will swing into full production of this type of bomber by the first of next year.

Supervised By Queen Mary

Bristol.—Queen Mary, flanked by two soldiers carrying rods, walked into a rest camp near here for women and babies and supervised clearance of undergrowth beneath trees so chairs and rugs could be placed in the shade. She had noticed the undergrowth during a previous visit.

Prisoners In France

London.—The British Broadcasting Corporation said the House of Commons was advised there now are no British war prisoners in occupied France. The BBC said all British military personnel in unoccupied France are detained at a single camp where conditions are favorable.

Revolts In Italy

People Show Resentment Under Nazi Domination

New York.—Home after two years in Italy, Maurice O. Boyd said that a number of minor revolts against the Fascist government have occurred in that country, caused principally over difficulty in obtaining food.

Boyd is a retired tourist agent, of Bloomfield, N.J.

"The country is full of Germans, both in and out of uniforms, and the people hate the Germans," he said. "The Italian people do not want the war and they have no spirit for it. There have been some minor revolutions against the Fascist government. There were several in Florence and at least one in Milan last winter, all of which were put down by German soldiers."

Boyd was among 26 passengers who arrived by clipper plane from Lisbon.

Special Badges

May Be Given To Men Rejected From The Army

Ottawa.—Provision of special badges for young Canadians who have sought to join the army and have been rejected for medical reasons is being considered by the defence department, Defence Minister Ralston said.

The minister said considerable thought had to be given the matter because of cases like that of a man who might be rejected because of some temporary disability and who, if given a badge, would have "moral immunity" ever after.

Col. Ralston said another kind of button would probably be granted men who had seen active service and were returned home because of disability or wounds.

Freighter Sunk

Survivors Tell How Torpedo Crashed Through Vessel

Ottawa.—Survivors of a freighter sunk by enemy action tell how the submarine came to the surface after sending a torpedo crashing into the vessel and hurled 60 shells at the stricken ship. The 39 crew members reached safety in the boats before the shelling began.

Watching their ship go down, the survivors said her keel pointed skywards then she slowly vanished from sight.

The man were in the boats for only seven hours before they were picked up.

Crew Members Rescued

London.—Reuters news agency reported from Lisbon that five Canadian crew members of the torpedoed 6,373-ton British motorship Silvervee had been landed there. The agency was not able immediately to identify the men, but said they had arrived from St. Vincent, Cape Verde Islands. The captain and two sailors were said to have been killed in the torpedoing, reported to have occurred May 31.

Children Collect War Funds

Edmonton.—Setting a high standard in their efforts to augment the Canadian war funds, school children of Edmonton contributed $13,628.25 to the Dominion funds, through purchase of war savings stamps during the year. Superintendent Rose S. Shoppard said at the last meeting of Edmonton public school board for the summer.

Satisfied With Small Crop

Australia Has 47,000,000 Bushels Of Wheat Yet Unsold

Canberra, Australia.—Government quarters announced here that Australia's last wheat crop totalled 83,200,000 bushels which, owing to an unusually dry season, was the lowest since 1929-1930 and means that the government will have to extend grants of $2,750,000 ($9,845,000) together with a loan of $1,000,000 ($3,580,000) to growers. Despite small production, it is pointed out that marketing problems, which otherwise would have been acute are thereby solved.

In the previous season Australia enjoyed a record harvest of 120,277,000 bushels of wheat, leaving a large carryover in face of a shipping shortage.

The Australian wheat board considers the present wheat position satisfactory as Australia now has 47,000,000 bushels yet unsold as against 31,000,000 bushels consumed within Australia annually, leaving a carry-over this year of 16,000,000 bushels, which is far below normal.

Harvest Leave Arranged

Will Be Granted Canadian Soldiers Who Can Be Spared

Ottawa.—Canadian soldiers who can be spared from their duties without damage to their unit or their own training will be granted limited leave to assist harvest operation this year, national defence headquarters said. The leave will not exceed four weeks and may be cancelled at any time. The regulation covering such leave provides that the limited number to whom it is granted must be personnel not engaged on active duty or receiving some important training.

When a man goes on harvest leave he will have no travelling allowances, pay or other assistance and during the period of the leave will lose the benefits of hospitalization, dental or medical care, together with allowances which would be granted in event of injury in the service.

Useful Information

Canberra, Australia.—Air Minister John McEwan said that senior members of the Royal Australian Air Force are returning from visits to theatres of war with information which will play an important part in the trend of future air training instruction.

Hitler's Record Is Laid Bare In Speech By Viscount Halifax

San Francisco.—Great Britain is anxious to preserve peace in the Pacific but will not submit to pressure by Japan even though occupied with a war elsewhere, Viscount Halifax said here.

"I need not tell you," the British ambassador to the United States informed the Commonwealth Club, "that it is the settled policy of the British government, as I have no doubt it is also of the government of the United States to do all in their power to preserve peace in the Pacific."

"Neither in the British Commonwealth of nations, nor I am sure in America, is there the slightest desire to pick a quarrel with Japan and provided that the Japanese government is willing to approach those questions which affect her in the Far East with due regard for the rights of other interested powers, I can see no reason why any difficulties need arise which might lead to a clash."

"But no one should make the mistake of thinking that under pressure of the European struggle, Great Britain need or will allow her legitimate rights and interests in other parts of the world to be ignored or set aside."

Lord Halifax reaffirmed recent statements by Prime Minister Churchill and Foreign Secretary Eden that "we are not prepared to enter into any discussions with Hitler and his associates at any time nor upon any subject whatsoever."

"The reason is plain to see," the ambassador said. "It springs from every page of recent history the record of Hitler's lies—and let us not forget that persistent and shameless lies is as much a weapon in his armory as all his airplanes and tanks—such that we are resolved never to pay the slightest attention in the future to any assurance which he may give."

Lord Halifax briefly reviewed Hitler's record, his treaties with Poland, Russia, Holland, Denmark, Belgium, his guarantees and his invasions, and declared:

"Indeed, for sheer efficiency as a liar, Hitler stands alone in history. On every occasion in the past he has used the lie as a deliberate weapon and as a cloak for action. That weapon, at any rate, we are determined he shall not use against the British Commonwealth of nations."

"But apart from those weapons which are familiar to you all, the tank, the airplane and the lie he has yet another. Calculated cruelty, which the Germans call 'frightfulness'."

"By frightfulness, I mean—I should say the Germans mean, the infliction of such measures of cruelty as will break the spirit of a nation and prevent it ever raising its head again."

"What Hitler has done in Poland is a typical example. More than 40,000 Polish civilians have been murdered in cold blood. Polish women have been sold into slavery. All the old cruelties with which the world is only too familiar have been practised on the Jews. Every effort has been made to dismember and wipe the Polish nation off the map and to sell its citizens into slavery."

"As with Poland, so in varying measure with every other country he has overrun."

"And what would be the German peace that Hitler might offer us?"

"No peace can come from him but a peace of slavery and sheer desolation from which all the eternal values which feed the souls of men would have departed."

"All that you and we alike have fought for, those precious things for which our fathers gave their blood, would be lost if they had never been, if we should allow this wicked man to gain the mastery over us."

"We in Britain and in the British Commonwealth of nations have made our choice. Canada, protected as she is by the Monroe doctrine, might reasonably have judged that her vital interests were not more in danger than those of the United States. The prime minister of Canada has given an American audience particulars as to the magnitude of Canada's contribution. Australia and New Zealand, far remote from the actual scene of conflict and sure of protection by the British fleet, might certainly have thought that this war, confined as it was for so many months to the European scene, was not their immediate concern, but when the day came, each of these sovereign nations took the same decision as did Great Britain. And India, too, has not hesitated to range herself upon the same side, as she has shown by the hundreds of thousands of her sons who have volunteered and by the magnificent and growing strength that she is bringing to our cause in the field of production. And the reason is not far to seek. For the British Commonwealth of nations has chosen as its atmosphere of freedom and of prolonged internal peace."

Brought Up To Strength

Auckland, N.Z.—Advices received from Cairo, Egypt, report that the New Zealand division has now been brought up to strength with reserves experienced in desert warfare to replace losses suffered in the unsuccessful defence of Greece and Crete.

Royal Air Force Carries Out Offensive On Enemy Shipping

London.—The Royal Air Force offensive against shipping lines on the west front has cost Germany 56 ships totalling 200,000 tons sunk or badly damaged in recent days, the air correspondent of the Press Association estimated.

Retired Admiral Sir Lionel Preston in another estimate stated that 85 Axis ships have been sunk in the last month "by air and submarine."

A sample of this wholesale destruction of shipping was shown when Blenheim bombers swept mast height among a concentration of German ships in Rotterdam harbor, leaving 17 sunk or damaged. Tonnage destroyed or damaged was between 90,000 and 100,000, the air ministry said.

Bombers of the R.A.F. made a dive attack on a large steamship and its E-boats escort near Cap Griz Nez, occupied France, but it could not be determined from the English coast whether the ship was hit before it disappeared into the haze.

"This wholesale destruction of shipping, said Sir Lionel during a BBC broadcast, totals 'nearly as many (ships) as they have sunk of ours.' He suggested the intense bombing of Germany's land communications had forced the Nazi to turn to water transport where they face "some of our problems."

An air ministry communique by Canadian Press said:

"It now is possible to tell in greater detail the story of the daylight attack carried out by Blenheim of the bomber command."

"Air reconnaissance recently discovered a large concentration of shipping at Rotterdam, including many vessels of 4,000 tons and upwards. It is from this port that enemy garrisons in occupied territories are largely supplied."

"A strong force of Blenheims was therefore dispatched. It crossed the Dutch coast soon after 4 o'clock on the afternoon of the 16th of July flying in two waves. The Dutch population, first in the fields and then in the streets of a city, waved welcome to the Blenheims as they swept into the attack mass high."

"The destruction caused to the enemy's ships was very great. The following main damage was caused: 'Eleven ships varying in tonnage between 1,000 and 2,000 tons were hit and left smoking. The Rotterdam-based Lloyd liner Balodren, a motor vessel of 17,000 tons, was hit by several bombs, one falling between the funnels. Debris from the ship was thrown high into the air."

"Two supply ships each of 4,000 tons exploded, the flames from one of them towering above the attacking aircraft. A smaller vessel of the same kind also was hit amidships and exploded."

"In all, 17 ships of an estimated tonnage of between 90,000 and 100,000 have been put out of action either permanently or for a long time to come."

"Five more ships totalling between 40,000 and 45,000 tons were severely damaged."

Value Of Canadian War Contracts Now Reaching High Total

Ottawa.—Value of contracts awarded and commitments made by the department of munitions and supply on Canadian and United Kingdom account now is approaching the $2,000,000,000 mark, it was announced.

Preliminary figures released by the department show the grand total for the period from July 14, 1939, to June, 1941, was $1,920,814,203.

Contracts placed on Canadian account, including commitments for plants and plant extensions, totalled $1,095,844,203, while the aggregate of orders placed on United Kingdom account was $602,673,000. United Kingdom commitments for plants and plant extensions, together with orders for the output of some of these plants, amounted to $212,297,000. Contracts of the civil aviation division for airport construction and land purchase under the British Commonwealth air training plan totalled nearly $20,000,000.

More than 135,000 contracts have been placed by the department of munitions and supply and its predecessor bodies, the defence purchasing board and the war supply board. These had an average value of $8,000 each. The rate at which contracts were awarded reached its peak in the quarter ended June 30, 1941, with a monthly average of 12,759. The average was 7,904 for the preceding three months, and 4,031 for the corresponding period a year ago. The total number of contracts awarded in May, 1941, reached a new peak of more than 13,600.

Canadian and United Kingdom commitments for the new plants, plant extensions and equipment totalled $511,236,321 on May 31. About 35 per cent, was for Canadian account. Facilities for the manufacture of miscellaneous goods (materials, not end products, special purchases, allotments to wholly-owned government companies, and purchases by controllers) accounted for the largest share, 26.6 per cent., with chemicals and explosives, and guns, mountings and carriages next, in order with 22.7 per cent, and 22.3 per cent, respectively. Percentage division of the remainder of the program follows: shells 10.4; tanks and carriers 2.9; aircraft 4.6; automotive equipment 1.5; bombs, depth charges and mines 0.4; machine tools and equipment 3.8; and railway equipment 4.8.

These capital expenditures fall into the following classifications:

Shells $52,952,759; guns, mountings and carriages $113,786,265; tanks and carriers $14,377,774; aircraft $23,682; automotive equipment $7,413,248; bombs depth charges, and mines $2,757,969; chemicals and explosives $116,193,973; machine tools and technical equipment $19,646,054; materials, not end products and special purchases $136,211,741; railway equipment purchases $24,234,498.

Indianapolis News: There was a time when the command for an invasion was: "Forward march!" These days the tip-off to the tourists is an announcement that a friendship pact has been signed.

THIS may not be a very educational subject to write on, but then we get so much war news that we have to turn to lighter things at times to relieve our jaded minds, as the troops have to have sports to keep their minds from the grim realities of this murderous war. Besides, it's summer vacation time, and we simply cannot get our mind thinking of serious things. Instead, we are contemplating the problem of raising sufficient money to take a brief holiday from the daily round and the common task, which in itself is quite serious just at present.

"CALLING ALL CARS"

Save Gasoline

A NATIONAL EMERGENCY

Canada is right up against an acute shortage of gasoline and fuel oil. Tankers that normally supply our country have been commandeered for vitally important overseas service.

The Commonwealth Air Training Plan, the rapid development of Canada's mechanized army units and the great work carried on by our corvettes make the demand for fuel urgent.

Our crude oil intake is limited. There is just one thing to do if our fighting forces are to carry on with a "full tank". Every Canadian motorist is asked to cut his daily gas consumption in half!

There are many ways by which this 50% saving can be made... ways and means to give you more mileage per gallon. You can drive slower so that you will use less gasoline. You can go fifty-fifty with your neighbours, inviting each other to share cars... for business, and for pleasure. People can readily go to and from work together, using one car instead of four... using one gallon of gasoline instead of several. Women as well as men can make these savings.

The amount of gasoline used in Canada for business, social and non-essential activities is amazingly high in proportion to that used by our fighting forces. One look at the figures would convince you that this situation must be reversed.

Canada does not ask or request you to put your car up. She merely asks for your help... asks that you walk sometimes when the distance isn't too great... that you take a shorter drive on Sunday afternoon... that you look after your car and keep it in good condition... that you say to your neighbour: "Let's use my car today. Jim we'll use yours tomorrow."

Every day, in greater and greater quantity, we must release gasoline and oil by the thousands of gallons to our throbbing munitions plants... to our tanks and armoured cars... to our fighting planes and bombers... to our corvettes and merchant ships that ply the vital sea-lanes... so that the day of victory may sooner be at hand.

Will YOU help?

It is also vitally important that you reduce the use of domestic and commercial fuel oil.

Fast Breathing

Is Recognized As Cause Of Fainting Spells

Don't force yourself to breathe too fast or you may become hyper-ventilated.

This phenomenon causing too much oxygen concentration in the blood is as old as man, but is only now being recognized as a cause of dizziness, fainting spells, cramps, muscle paralysis and unconsciousness.

In a summary of experiments by Dr. H. C. Hinshaw and Dr. W. M. Boothby of the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., and Dr. R. Fraser and Dr. W. Sargent of England, the Journal of the Abbott Laboratories, Chicago, says this condition may be the cause of many airplane accidents ascribed to pilot error.

Fear in a tense moment while flying causes a rapid increase in the breathing rate and pilots of airplanes who have hundreds of hours of flying experience have admitted genuine fear and even panic when flying under unusually hazardous weather conditions.

If the hyperventilation proceeds too far, the experimenters found, the phenomenon of freezing to the controls is not uncommon cause of accidents among young fliers occurs. Many pilots who have experienced it say cramps in their hands, arms, legs and feet made it impossible for them to release the controls.

Plenty Of Japs

Japanese Empire Now Beyond The Hundred Million Mark

An article from Tokyo in the Christian Century reports great satisfaction in all circles in Japan over the result of the 1940 census. The Japanese empire's total population has gone beyond the 100,000,000 mark standing now at 105,226,101, an increase of over 6,000,000 since 1935. Japan proper has a population of 73,114,308. The Korean people number 24,326,327. Tokyo and Osaka have grown more than 10 per cent. in five years, and the population of Tokyo alone, 6,778,804, is now as great as that of all Australia. Nevertheless, more emphasis is being given to early marriage, increased birth rate, eugenics and infant mortality.—Victoria Times.

For Canadian Nurses

English Tea Merchant Turns Over Estate For Leave Home

On the beautiful country estate of an English tea merchant, the Canadian army has established a leave home where Canadian nursing sisters can find relaxation from hospital duties. The estate was turned over to the Canadians by Col. and Mrs. Kenneth Maitland in gratitude to Canada where three of their four children now are living safe from air raid terrors. Col. Maitland is the leading executive of a huge English tea concern. The children are at school near Montreal. Thirty-five nurses can be accommodated at one time and they have the run of the large mansion and the 75-acres of land surrounding the houses. The Maitlands have turned over the whole house to the nurses, fixing up rooms over the garage for their own use. The home was opened by the Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian high commissioner in London and Mrs. Massey. Sister A. J. MacLeod of Edmonton was present at the ceremony.

DRESS MADE IN VERY FEW PARTS

By Anne Adams

Cool comfort and pert, youthful charm are combined in Pattern 4651, an Anne Adams midsummer special! The open diagram view shows how simple a style it will be to cut and sew, for its planned in a minimum of pattern parts. The entire front is cut in one piece, with side slashes high above the waist to hold up the gathered softness of the bodice. The back is in slim paneled style. Even the cool cap sleeves are simple to do, for they're cut in-one with the bodice. Darts keep your shoulders trim; the square neckline is most becoming. Consider stitching up two versions—one in a printed seersucker with lace and ribbon-bow trim; the other in sturdy vic-rac edge cotton. Do order your pattern right away!

Pattern 4651 is available in misses' and women's sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 takes 3 1/2 yards 35 inch fabric and 2 1/2 yards lace edging.

Essay Contest

Students In 28 Canadian Universities To Write On Post-War Reconstruction

Dr. F. Cyril James, chairman of the committee on reconstruction, announced that R. W. Mayhew, Liberal member of parliament for Victoria, has provided awards for a university essay contest on post-war reconstruction.

Students in 28 Canadian universities will take part in the contest, to be held this autumn, said Dr. James, principal of McGill University. There will be two $200 first prizes, one each for English and French essays, in addition to others.

New Type Of Shelter

Will Be Supplied Free To People With Small Incomes

Warm and comfortable indoor shelters are gradually replacing the cold Andersons and other murky underground structures which were built in many gardens of private houses in London at the beginning of the war.

Decorated to harmonize with the furnishings the shelter take their place in suburban or town villa as part of the equipment of the modern dining room. Some types house four adult sleepers comfortably. Others are made for two adults and two children. In some the top bunk can be let down to form a settee.

The government-sponsored type of indoor shelter can be converted into a table. It is built of steel, six feet six inches long by four feet wide. The top is a stout sheet of steel, the floor is sprung to make a comfortable base for a mattress. The sides of steel mesh can be removed when the top is being used for a table. The shelter is supplied in sections for assembly by the householders themselves in accordance with simple instructions.

Herbert Morrison, minister for home security, in announcing the new design in the House of Commons, said that though it was not proof against a direct hit, he considered it excellent cover from the debris of a two- or three-storey house. The shelter had been tested by dropping a heavy weight on it and by a swinging blow like that of a collapsing floor.

The government plans to supply these shelters free to people with incomes of £250 or less. The income limit for free issue of the Anderson shelter was £250.

Welcome Home

Man Found There Was Good Reason For Walter's Joy

The Chicago Daily News tells this story: Robert J. Casey, returning from the wars, stepped ashore in New York and went at once to the hotel where he had spent his final night on American soil nearly two years before. Looking about for old acquaintances he was greeted by strange faces until a waiter came forward and welcomed him warmly. Touched by the demonstration, Mr. Casey beamed until the garcon produced a wallet and smoothed out a $1 bill. Across this face was penned in the Casey scrawl: "If I return safely I will give you $10 for this."

Devoted To His Country

Paderewski Gave Himself And His Fortune To Poland

When Clemenceau met Paderewski at Versailles in 1919, he said:

"You are Paderewski, who was once the world's greatest pianist?" "Yes," answered Paderewski. "And now you are the Premier of a country?"

"Yes."

"Mon Dieu," said Clemenceau, "what a comedown."

Paderewski did not agree. He was a patriot first and a pianist afterward. Above even the brilliancy for which he strove as an artist was his dream for the creation of a united nation from a divided Poland. In his country's behalf, he foresook his career at its brightest and yielded his fortune. When the World War began, his wealth was in millions; when it ended his purse was empty and he was in debt.

His surpassing musical gifts and all they had come to mean in his life, Paderewski abandoned eagerly for his country. Hope of a liberated Poland had been his from birth. He was not three years old when the village of Kurówka on Podolia, then part of Russian Poland, where he was born on November 6, 1860, was ravaged by Cossacks putting down a Polish uprising. His father, a land proprietor, was sent to Siberia. The memory of that exile seared Paderewski's exile evermore.

He remembered it when the Czar long afterward told him that he was happy to have so distinguished a subject.

"Sir," Paderewski replied. "I am a Pole."

Blood Banks

Red Cross To Establish One In Edmonton This Year

Plans for establishment this year of a Red Cross blood bank in Edmonton, to collect donated blood and send it to Britain, was announced by Elmer E. Roper, president of the Edmonton branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society.

The objective is a panel of 2,000 donors. At least 100 donations a week will be taken.

The blood will be refrigerated, processed into serum and sent to Red Cross headquarters in Toronto where it will be dried and shipped to Britain.

Mr. Roper said: "Toronto, Hamilton and Ottawa already have blood banks and others are planned in various centres across the Dominion."

THE HOLY SPIRIT INSPIRES NEW TESTAMENT LETTERS

Golden Text: Every scripture inspired of God is also profitable for teaching, for reproof, for correction, for instruction, which is in righteousness. II. Timothy 3:16.

Devotional reading: Psalm 19:7-14.

Galatians 1:11. For I make known to you, brethren, that the gospel which was preached by me, that it is not after man. For neither did I receive it from man, nor was I taught it, but it came to me through revelation of Jesus Christ.

I. Thessalonians 2:13. And for this cause we also thank God without ceasing, that when we received from you the word of the message, even the word of God, ye accepted it not as the word of men, but, as it is in truth, the word of God, which also worketh in you that believe.

II. Timothy 3:14. But abide thou in the things which thou hast learned, and hast been assured of, knowing of whom thou hast learned them; and that from a babe thou has known the sacred writings which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus. Every scripture inspired of God is also profitable for teaching, for reproof, for instruction, for instruction which is in righteousness: that the man of God may be complete, furnished completely unto every good work.

II. Peter 3:14. Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for these things, give diligence that ye may be found pure, without spot, and blameless in his sight. And account that the long suffering of our Lord is salvation; even as our beloved brother Paul also, according to the wisdom given to him, wrote unto you; as also in all his epistles, speaking in them of these things, wherein are some things hard to be understood, which the ignorant and unsteadfast wrest, as they do also the other scriptures, unto their own destruction.

Jude 3. Beloved, while I was giving all diligence to write unto you of our common salvation. I was constrained to write unto you exhorting you to contend earnestly for the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints.

Sweet Corn In England

British-American Hybrid Corn Will Be Propagated In The States

Small amounts of the best British inbred corn will be protected and propagated in Connecticut until the war is over.

Dr. W. R. Singleton of the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station at New Haven received a letter from C. D. R. Dawson, an experimental plant breeder in London, containing a small packet of seed of a British-American hybrid containing a Connecticut inbred as one parent. The cross will be planted at the Station Farm and the results reported to Dawson.

"There can be no scientific breeding of sweet corn in England now," said Dr. Singleton. "Sweet corn is a luxury crop in the British Isles and the arable land must be used for plants that give quantity returns in food and fodder."

Mending Stores

London Establishments Do Good Business In Repairing Stockings

London's invisible mending stores are doing a thriving business repairing silk stockings that women are digging up from trunks and boxes stored away in attics and cellars for years.

Rationing of clothes and scarcity of silk stockings brought the demand upon repair departments. New girls are being trained as quickly as possible but there still are many vacancies for "ladder repair" recruits.

"We will take almost any applicant we can get," said the manager of a hosiery repairs establishment. "Our firm alone dealt with tens of thousands of repairs in a month."

Working On War Jobs

Industries Employing People From School For Deaf At Belleville

A group of men and women who substitute eyes for ears in developing keen observation and whose hands often have incredible dexterity due to their ability to concentrate without distraction are rapidly banding into a new line of workmen to back up Canada's fighting men. They are deaf and hard-of-hearing workers, graduates from trades rooms of the School for the Deaf at Belleville. They are being placed as rapidly as possible in important industries through the free employment service of the National Society of the Deaf and the Hard-of-Hearing, Bloor street east, Toronto.

A NATIONAL HEALTH POLICY

Pleading for a more aggressive national health policy, with Federal grants to the provinces, Dr. Gordon Bates, General Director of the Health League of Canada, predicted that with adequate building up of national public health policies and the cultivation of a live public attitude toward the problems of health conservation, venereal disease, among other diseases, might one day be eliminated from Canada.

Dr. Bates, commending the recent outspoken attitude of the Federal Minister of Pensions and Health, Hon. Ian MacKenzie, said that "we must stop thinking of health as a parochial matter. National health should be our objective. Only as we fight together on a united front will we achieve our great ideal: health for all Canadians and hence a greater Canada."

He said, "some public health authorities suggest that there is no moral aspect to the venereal disease problem or if there is it is the business of the churches. With this attitude I take sharp issue. If we are to control venereal disease by chemical means alone and by so doing damage the moral fibre of our people, then our last stage will be worse than our first and we may well emerge without even physical health, without religion and as close to paganism as is Germany because without morality, religion goes also."

Makes Clothing Last

Australian Women Wearing Clothing Purchased 41 Years Ago

Coupons for clothes would not worry Mrs. Daisy Bates of Sydney, Australia, who bought her last wardrobe 41 years ago.

"In 1900 I went to a Parisian tailor in Perth," she said. "I told him I was going into the bush and wanted to take with me a complete wardrobe, one that would not get out of date."

"In it were six blue serge coats and skirts, two grey tweed Norfolk jacket costumes, another of black broadcloth and a white taffeta ball-room gown. None of my clothes has ever been hung and only washable garments pressed. The art of keeping them in perfect condition is to fold them correctly."

Mrs. Bates, who has devoted a lifetime to studying aboriginal lore, collected much information about rapidly-vanishing Australian tribes for presentation to the Commonwealth government.

Only Gear She Knew

DAUGHTER OF DESTINY

—BY—
Eleanor Atterbury Colton

CHAPTER XV.

When the real world came back and Devona could open her eyes again she looked straight into Macias' quiet smile.

"That's better," he said, and one arm under her head, raised her up a little, pressed a brandy glass into her hand. "Now drink this."

Obediently, she swallowed the searing drink, felt the blood surge into her face again, felt strength returning to her trembling legs.

"Thanks," she gasped, "I—must have—fainted."

He smiled, nodded. "You must be very hungry." He drew her to her feet, pulled her arm through his. "Come, you must eat something. Put the color back in those pretty white cheeks."

The big dining room was still virtually deserted. Macias ordered quickly, sat watching her, sipping a glass of red wine thoughtfully, as she devoured the thick steak, hot vegetables, the soul-warming, savory food a waiter set before her. Careless even of what he might be thinking, she was only grateful for this decent meal she'd had in days.

"Thanks so much," she said when she'd finished. "I—told you I was—hungry."

He nodded. "You say you speak three languages?"

Some lingering premonition of danger—had he sensed the outbreak of her mind, but she thrust it aside, determinedly. "Yes. Spanish, French and a little Italian."

"Anything else—play the piano, dance—"

"I sing—a little. Not very well."

"Sing!" He pounced on the word. "Let me hear you. Come this way."

Reluctantly she followed him up on to the orchestra platform where a slim, too-pale young musician was thumbing through sheet music.

"Manuel," Macias called to him. "This is Miss Raebourne. I want to hear her sing. Find something she knows."

A case of singing for her supper, Devona thought wryly as she smiled at the pianist, picked out one of the sweeter popular songs she'd heard often enough for risk trying.

"O.K., sister. You set your own time. I'll follow." Manuel slid onto the piano bench.

As she sang, some of own desperation sifted into the plaintive melody, colored its artificiality with real emotion, gave a passionate depth to her tone. She'd never sung better, she realized duly. And probably never before had her whole life depended on it.

"Different from what we usually want," Macias thought aloud, "but not bad at that. Now try something with more—swing. Hotter—you know."

Manuel began again. A torchy song this time. One she'd never seen before. Stumbling, she did her best to follow.

"Swing it, sister. Like this." Manuel muttered, pounced out the rhythm.

"Try the chorus again, please," she begged. "I think I can do it better this time."

It was better. She hated it, but Macias smiled, nodded. "Manuel could teach you that stuff all right." He helped her down off the platform.

"I think I can use you, all right," Macias went on when they were back at the table. Calmly he reached for her slim hand, held it boldly a moment. "Would you like to work for me?"

Devona hesitated. Again the premonitive warning. Again she pushed it aside, drew her hand free. "Here, you mean?"

She glanced around the big dining room into the bar lounge beyond where half a dozen bartenders polished their stem-glassware behind the long bar and the costumed waiters moved about emptying ash trays, setting tables, filling low buckets.

"I think I could use you with my strolling players. The work—" he smiled slowly—"would not be difficult. I think you would like it."

Devona, still conscious of the touch of his hand on hers, was suddenly quite sure she would loathe it. But—it was a job. "I'm sure I would, Mr. Macias. You are very kind to—"

He waved that aside with a shrug. "How soon can you begin?"

"Why—any time you say."

"Good." He consulted his wrist-watch. "I think I have time to help you select your costumes right now. Come."

Rising he slipped a hand under her elbow, steered her toward the foyer. "Tell Joe to bring the big car around," he told the doorman.

Almost as if by magic, a big black town car appeared just outside, a uniformed chauffeur at the wheel, the doorman, all smiles and smiles now, waiting beside the open car door.

"Where are we going?" she managed, casually, as the big car turned into the main stream of traffic.

"To get you some pretty dresses to dress up in when you sing for my patrons," Macias explained, smiling. "You're going to be a very beautiful young lady when I get through."

She was, too. Even Devona had to admit that to herself an hour later as she stood before the dressmaker's long mirror. Pretty as something out of a Goya painting.

A full, many-tiered, ruffled skirt of soft red satin over layers and layers of petticoats, a snug bodice that followed the curves of her pretty bust and shoulders, a red rose tucked behind her ear, tiny red slippers to replace her rainsoaked shoes.

"There—" the dressmaker stepped back to enjoy her own handiwork. "The prettiest costume you ever had, Señor Macias. And, I guess, the wrinkled little customer smiled archly, "the prettiest girl to wear it."

Devona winced at that. Just how many girls before her had accepted a job as strolling troubadour? And just what was she getting into?

"Very nice," Macias approved, but his eyes were on Devona's face, not the costume.

Flinging, she pretended not to notice. "It is a lovely costume," she murmured, plucked again to escape the searching scrutiny of his dark eyes.

"O.K. And Miss Raebourne will need a couple of changes, so let's see what else you have," Macias ordered curtly.

In all, he bought her three complete changes. The soft red satin, a lovely white lace, a daring black net—all Spanish in style, all provoking in line.

The costumes would help her create a new personality of herself. Devona realized as she paraded peacock fashion up and down before the critical Macias. But could her singing match up?

"I'm afraid you're investing too much in me Mr. Macias," she protested, conscience-stricken. "After all, I've had no experience. Maybe your patrons will think—"

"And now—I'll take you back to your hotel. That will give you time to change your dress."

Devona, startled, glanced at him. "Change?"

"You're having dinner with me, of course. We have so much to talk over."

The big car was rolling to a stop in front of the modest Brownstone now. Macias himself helped her out.

"I'll call for you about 8:30," he said. "You'll be ready?"

He made it a question, but Devona realized only too well that it was actually a command.

"Yes, thank you," she said and escaped into the Brownstone's dim lobby.

As she passed the desk the room clerk, wreathed now in smiles, bowed slavishly.

From now on he realized as the elevator bore her swiftly up to the haven of her tiny, dim room on the tenth floor, things were going to be different. Just how different she could only guess. And somehow the guessing frightened her. Only too well aware of the subtle change in Macias since she'd denied any further connection with Dale Brasher, she realized this was a real test of her self-confidence. She'd have to watch her step. Macias' every gesture—the touch of his hand, the soft overtones in his voice that didn't hide the insinuations his eyes made as boldly—everything told her.

Tired, and suddenly afraid at the prospect looming ahead, Devona closed her door, locked it securely,

As if to insure these last moments of freedom.

Devona dressed carefully. She'd learned that much about her future employer from their visit to the costume's this afternoon. He was influenced by clothes and colors and hated the long hair and the costume waiters moved about emptying ash trays, setting tables, filling low buckets.

"I think I could use you with my strolling players. The work—" he smiled slowly—"would not be difficult. I think you would like it."

"The first song you sang for me this morning," he smiled. "I think my patrons will like it."

He announced her then and there was a spattering of applause, and a little murmur trailed her up to the platform. She must do her best, prove to Macias he hadn't been mistaken in giving her this job. She should be—she was everlastingly grateful to him. She'd show him that now.

But standing there, alone, and terribly frightened, in the glaring isolation of the white spotlight, she knew she was failing. Her voice, faltering, unsure of the notes, lost in the huge dining room, sounded like some stranger's. Nervousness jerked at her knees, made her mouth dry, contracted her throat. It was awful.

She sang two numbers. And that was too many, she thought miserably as she slipped back to the table where Macias waited.

"I'm terribly sorry. That was so awful," she gasped, sank trembling into her chair.

He smiled. "You were frightened, that's all. You will get over that. And with the costumes and the real Spanish songs—they will like you all right. You'll see."

Grateful for that straw of encouragement, Devona smiled. "You really think so?"

"But of course. Come. I'll prove it." Rising he led the way to that little private office across the foyer.

Closing the door on the gayety outside, Macias moved to the puller's desk, took a long, formidable-looking document from a drawer. "Suppose we draw up a little contract."

"A contract?" Devona echoed, puzzled. "But that won't be necessary, will it? I mean, I'm so grateful for the opportunity—"

Macias unscrewed the cap to his fountain pen. "A contract will be a protection—to both of us," he said, calmly filled in blanks on the long sheet. "First—your name. Devona Raebourne is too long. He thought a moment. "We'll call you—Dona Carliotta."

Devona shrugged. A new job. A new life. A new name. Perhaps even a new fate. What difference did it make? No one had tried to find Devona Raebourne. No one would ever hunt for Dona Carliotta!

Then, as Macias talked on, she realized that her hours on this job would be long—the cocktail hour until 2 when the bar closed. Her costumes must be paid for out of her small salary. Her songs would be selected by Manuel and the three troubadours. Her tips would be hers to keep.

Tips! Devona throttled her pride. Tips for what? Dancing, it seemed, with patrons who needed a partner. Playing hostess to parties Macias wished entertained.

She set her jaw, banished her last convent-bred scruple of the dark closets of her mind. This was a job. She'd tackled it. She'd seen it through. She had to. There was no other way out.

With fingers that shook until her signature was almost unreadable, she affixed her name to the document that bound her to Macias for one year from date. That Rubicon was crossed, she thought as Macias blotted the signature carefully, laid the paper in a drawer. Desperately, she fought the feeling that she'd sold herself. A year wasn't long. She could stand anything for a year. And by that time maybe some other solution would be possible.

"Now—may I take you home?" he smiled again.

"Yes—please," and waited quietly while he sent for her wraps, ordered the car.

On the sidewalk outside the club, a newsboy shouted an extra. For a moment, Devona didn't notice. Then she glanced snagged on the glaring red headline. ASSISTANT D. A. FACES DEATH: she read and her breath stopped in her throat. Assistant D. A. But that was Dale.

The boy held the paper toward her beseechingly. "Paper miss?"

"Assistant Dale Brasher injured in gun battle," she read and her eyes looked at the blurry picture of him.

Dale—hurt! But how badly. Was he—dead?

"Well, our friend Brasher getting into difficulties," Macias, at her elbow, drew her back to herself.

She nodded, turned deliberately and stepped into the waiting limousine. "Yes, it looks that way."

Macias, seating himself beside her, smiled strangely. "You are interested? Shall I get a paper for you?"

Devona shook her head.

"No; not at all interested." And, hating herself for the clamor her heart had set up, hoped devoutly that Macias hadn't noticed her confusion.

But, once back in the hotel, she snatched a paper from the stands, took it, trembling, up to her tiny room. There she read every word. About the raid Dale had planned, the terrifying exchange of gunfire, of his being wounded, shot through the lung, of the ultimate escape of the gunmen. And suddenly she was remembering a conversation by a moonlit pool.

"It's uncanny," Dale had said. "Just when I think I have it all set, some one tips them off."

And now he was hurt—perhaps seriously. Hungry she studied the blurred newspaper picture. Dale all of life that it gave you love and loyalty, instead, you got heartbreak.

Her slim, tired body shook as she wept until all tears seemed drained from her, leaving only dry, cracked soles.

Finally she sat up, dried her eyes resolutely. "Daughter of a strange destiny," she said aloud. Maybe that had to be, she thought wryly. But there was no use weeping because she wouldn't behave like a pretty dress.

Then, even as she slipped out of the pretty red velvet, hung in the back of her closet, she tried to put Dale out of her thoughts. She'd learn to hate him. With every shred of pride and self-respect she had. He'd imposed on her. She'd never forgive him for that. And she didn't really care now what happened to him—ever.

To-morrow she'd meet Macias for luncheon, as he'd promised her to do. After that she'd begin her new life.

"Devona Raebourne is dead," she said to the pretty red gown. "Long live Dona Carliotta!"

Wished Him Luck

Queen Mary Gave Airman A Ride To His Home

When Queen Mary saw a young airman striding along a country road, she stopped her car and offered him a lift. Inviting him to sit beside her, she set him down near his own village in time for Sunday dinner. When they arrived, 19-year-old Freddy Knight stepped out of the car and saluted, and old schoolmates saw Queen Mary shake hands with him and wish him luck. "He felt nervous when Queen Mary chatted to him," said Freddy's mother. "But," he said, "I feel now that I can fight for my country forever."

Another Point Of View

Writer Explains How People Can Find Joy In Germany

The following illuminating example of "solemn nonsense" in Nazi Germany is perhaps worth publicity. It is from a recent article in a German paper and is published in the London Times. The writer is concerned to reproach those who complain about the joylessness of the times. "Joy in these days," he says, "must be found in small things. For example, the housewife unexpectedly finds an old collar which can still be used."

"She has joy. Many other similar examples," the writer goes on, "can be given."

Definition Of Good Cook

America received a 1941 definition of a "good cook" recently when Dr. Helen S. Mitchell, director of nutrition for the Federal Service Administration, proposed this test: "A good cook is one who conserves the nutrition value in foods and makes them so tasty that her family likes what is good for them."

The vicar, who was presenting these, said, "The contents of the purse will in time disappear, but this clock will never go."

For Better Lighting

Austrian Refuge Invents Device To Use In Blackout

An Austrian refugee, Gerald J. Holton, now a senior at Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., has constructed a street-lighting device for air-raid "blackouts" that he believes is superior to those now in use in England.

Holton said the present lights in Britain give a visibility comparable to starlight, which he contended was not sufficient for safety. He cited the fact that 1,000 pedestrians a month were being killed in England by automobiles.

Holder of an engineering certificate from Oxford, Holton explained his blackout device makes streets appear dark from above while having enough light to guide street traffic and permit rapid filling of air-raid shelters.

Holton was born in Berlin of Viennese parents and reared in Vienna. He went to England in 1938 and went through Oxford in two years.

He left for America the day Italy entered the war. His ambition is to teach, because "it is one's duty to try to preserve values in chaotic times as these."

London's Biggest Docks

Are Within A Ten-Mile Area Near Centre Of City

The biggest and most vital docks of London are concentrated within a 10-mile area near the centre of the city. In normal times, this commercial port handles 70 per cent of England's meat imports, 56 per cent of the rubber, 44 per cent of the wool, 33 per cent of the oil and 27 per cent of the timber.

Speaking of Advertising

Some years ago, when Patti was going to sing in Detroit, Mabley, the great clothier, was the first man at the ticket-window when it opened.

"How much for the house?" he asked.

The astonished ticket-man figured it up to about ten thousand dollars.

"All right; I'll take it," said Mabley; and all who came for tickets after that were told "Mr. Mabley has bought the house, you must apply to him."

Mabley would not sell a ticket; he gave away every seat. It paid him, for Mabley, the clothier, the music-lover, was more talked about than Patti.

IMPORTANT NOTICE to Men Liable for Military Training

FOR Public Safety, by Proclamation, dated June 27th, 1941 (under authority of The National Resources Mobilization Act 1940 and The War Measures Act), The Governor in Council has now made liable for military training for the defence of Canada—

—all male British subjects resident in Canada at any time since September 1st, 1939, who, on July 15th, 1940, were unmarried, or childless widowers, and who on July 1st, 1940, had reached the ages of

|------------------|--------------------|
| Twenty-one years | Twenty-three years |
| Twenty-two years | Twenty-four years  |

"and also men who attained or will attain the age of twenty-one years on or after the first day of July, 1940, and who were on the fifteenth day of July (1940), unmarried or widowers without child or children."

Extract from Paragraph 3 of Proclamation.

Men designated in the foregoing are further required

"to submit themselves for medical examination and to undergo military training for a period of four months within Canada or the territorial waters thereof, and to report at such places and times and in such manner and to such authorities or persons as may be notified to them respectively by a Divisional Registrar of an Administrative Division."

Extract from Paragraph 4 of Proclamation.

SPECIAL PROVISIONS

designed to facilitate equitable conditions of mobilization

Deferring of Training Periods to Avoid Individual Hardship

If the Board is satisfied that the calling out of any man for military training will cause extreme hardship to those dependent upon such man, the Board may, from time to time, postpone the training period of the man: Provided that such man shall apply for a postponement order in accordance with the provisions of subsection one of section ten of the regulations.

Postponement Applications Must be Made in Writing

No application for a postponement order may be made otherwise than in writing, by the man called out, to the Divisional Registrar who issued the "Notice—Medical Examination" and within eight clear days of the date appearing on such notice.

Any person who appears before a Board shall do so at his own expense.

War Industry and Seasonal Occupations given Consideration

In the national interest, applications for postponement of training of key men engaged in war industries, or in essential occupations, may be addressed to the Divisional Registrar concerned.

Eligible Men Must Not Leave Canada without Authority

No male British subject who is liable to be called out for military training shall, after his age class has been called out by proclamation, leave Canada, for any reason whatsoever, unless and until he has been so authorized in writing by the Chairman of the Board to whose jurisdiction such man is subject.

Eligible men must notify authorities immediately of change of address or marital status

If you are a single man or childless widower between the ages of 19 and 45 and if you change your address, or if you marry, you must immediately notify

THE NATIONAL WAR SERVICES DIVISIONAL REGISTRAR IN THE DIVISION IN WHICH YOU ARE REGISTERED

If you do not know the name and address of your Divisional Registrar, ask at your local post office.

Failure to comply with this requirement may subject you to a fine or imprisonment.

CIVIL RE-EMPLOYMENT

Provision has been made for the reinstatement of men in their positions of employment, after their periods of training or service, under conditions that will facilitate their re-entry to civilian life.
